

Special Topics in International Economics 1

GUO, Sizhi

Elective 2 credit

1. Course Description

At the stage of graduate school, it is important to learn the theory and knowledge on the international economy, emerging economies such as China, and to utilize the theory and knowledge at the same time to cultivate problem finding, survey / analysis and research ability accurately . In the previous term, we will analyze and research the international economy, emerging economies such as China at all times from both sides of the macro and micro, and discuss lectures while studying with students.