

民俗学研究

Elective 2 credit

SUZUKI, Toshihiro

1. Course Description

A folklore is the learning which makes the people's living change clear with the living habit handed down to all part as a material. The phenomenon performed as a custom exists in our life. The reason is obscurity, but some reasons are there. The phenomenon which sounds a phenomenon and a reason and gets in touch to present, and, I have for my object to record a living magazine in an area.

Bases of a folklore are collection of material and an analysis. Collection of material is a literature search and interview survey.

I lecture to the center on study method of a life history in particular at this session.