

Seminar : Archaeometry

Elective 2 credit

OKADA, Yasushi

1. Course Description

The value of cultural properties is not universal, and their values vary greatly depending on the times and viewpoints. Cultural properties created by people's cultural activities are a living proof of mankind, and have various information in many aspects. In order to capture the intrinsic value of cultural properties, it is important to examine cultural properties in the humanities and natural sciences, and to determine their values and significance from a multifaceted and multifaceted perspective.