1. Course Description

This course is designed for sophomore (second-year students) major in Chinese. This course focuses on writing skills. Writing is one of the most difficult skills for Japanese learners. However, by mastering the writing skills, students can improve other skills including listening and speaking. In this lecture, students are able to acquire Chinese language expressions and application by numerous practices based on the basic grammar already acquired. Also, students could gain independent learning skills through the process.
