Programming practical

FUJITA, Yoshikatsu

1. Course Description

This course aims to study basic programming skills by employing JavaScript as an introductory programming language.

JavaScript is classified as script language, which is easy to learn and light to describe dynamic processing on any browsers. Students are expected to practice basic programming skills by writing various source codes in the class, including fundamental sort and search algorithms.