

学校心理学

Syllabus Number

EDP-201

Elective

2 credit

MURAKAMI, Kana

1. Course Description

School psychology is an academic field to investigate theories and practices to understand the problems which children may face at school and to support them to solve. For this support, it is very important to understand educational environment and developmental stages of children, and to know what kind of problems are behind them. Also, to know how the adults, such as parents and teachers, should cooperate to support children is important.

We are raised by family and society, and then will raise children. Through this lecture, let your understandings of school and children be deepened to support them through looking back your school days.