

アジアの国際関係Ⅱ

Syllabus Number	INR-206
Elective	2 credit
MICHELIN, Franck

1. Course Description

The topic of this class is: "The international relations in East Asia: history and today". The first semester will be about the period between Antiquity and the start of modern times when the second will be about modern times until today. The international relations constitute a very broad topic, but we will focus on two of them: the relations inside of the region, and the relations between East Asia and the outside world.

The course will be given on demand: the material, made of presentation files and audio files, will be available to students for downloading. There will be no tests on the campus, but the students will have to send their homework through the LMS system.