

Introduction to Lifelong Learning II

Syllabus Number

EDU-212

Elective

2 credit

TANMA, Yasuhito

1. Course Description

In this course, focusing on the theme of lifelong learning society, you will study the learning system based on collaborating with diverse institutions and the role of education according to the characteristics of learners. For developing learning space and creating a mutual-learning society, the course will have practical lectures about specific activities for fostering learning of engaging with the society such as workshop and active learning. In this course, you will discuss about the role of space, projects, employees, and government of lifelong learning and community and adult education required in the modern society which is becoming complex and where learning is becoming more diverse.