

Learning in Social Activities II

Syllabus Number

EDU-301

Compulsory Elective
2 credit

TANMA, Yasuhito

1. Course Description

In this course, focusing on the theme of actions and lifestyle of people in society, you will explore the process of learning that redefines the economic growth amid globalization. In the learning for building the society, we see the self-directed learning process that transforms the existing values and behavior through proactive involvement in problem solving. On the basis of the theory of community and adult education that supports the process where people from society's objects to society's subjects, we will discuss the role of learning and education covering the post-capitalist society.