1. Course Description

Correctional psychology is one field of criminal psychology that aims to support the recovery of antisocial people, such as criminals and juvenile delinquents, and to enable them to adjust to society.

Therefore, the topics covered are "theory for understanding crime and delinquency," "the difference between clinical practice for general person and criminals," "assessment in the field of crime and delinquency," and "rehabilitation facilities (such as prison and juvenile training school)."

I'm going to give lectures on the basic knowledge of crime and delinquency, such as how crime and delinquency is happening in the world, what factors are involved in crime and delinquency, how they respond to criminal, etc.

I hope that you will take the knowledge to objectively view crime.
