1. Course Description

Tourists use various resources to achieve their tourism objectives. This is true not only for domestic tourism but also for international tourism. The purpose of this lecture is to conduct economic analysis of the resources used by tourism, the environmental impacts of tourism, economic analysis of international tourism, and economic analysis of tourism policy. In particular, in this lecture, we analyze international tourism using international economics or international trade theory from the viewpoint that international tourism is the trade of goods and services by tourists themselves.,
