

Geography of Foreign Countries II

Syllabus Number

GGR-206

Elective

2 credit

IIZUKA, Ryo

1. Course Description

The world is wide. Cultivating an understanding of local areas and the diversity across the world is important for developing students' perspectives. Each local area has its own natural history, human history, and culture, which are all related to each other. This lecture deals with the features of some local areas from geographical perspectives. Especially, this lecture focuses on regional geography of the UK and Benelux countries to capture the areas from the micro perspective.