

Chinese Economy I

Syllabus Number

ECP-311

Elective

2 credit

GUO, Sizhi

1. Course Description

To grasp emerging country economies, namely China and India, we not only take a broad view of the economic and industrial condition/development on the ground, also should study the China and India 's major company, which is to be the main player of the economy and industry.

Comparative study is effective and is very often employed when one tries to grasp the characteristics of an emerging phenomenon. Therefore, in Chinese Economy I, we have mainly studied China and Indian economies and industries. In Chinese

Economy II, we will focus on the companies' business activities of the two countries.