

都市と防災 I

Syllabus Number

POL-305

Elective

2 credit

SEKI, Hideo

1. Course Description

In disaster response, it is important to control an unspecified large number of people quickly and certainly. In disaster prevention administration, human rights violations and priorities become political issues. This lecture will focus on how the government has regulated and subsidized, how to self-evaluate and how it has changed. It covers recent cases and damage estimation in large cities, its history and the present condition of disaster response. To acquire basic knowledge and insight about disaster management. For this purpose, I will provide a lot of information including videos with you.