

Junior Seminar I

Syllabus Number

SEM-301

Compulsory 2
credit

PRUNUS, Navarro Ines

1. Course Description

Spain, historically, is a country that has received the influence of other cultures and in turn, has influenced the culture of other countries. Specially after the era of discoveries when this tendency increases. The trace left by Spain in the course of history of both continents has been great. As a result, the history of Spain and Latin America has a particular relationship and from here the students can get interesting research topics. In every Spanish speaking country there are linguistic particularities worthy of being studied. In addition each country has its own historical, cultural, geographical, gastronomic, etc. characteristics.

The students will choose the topic they want to research about and prepare the presentation under the teacher's supervision.