1. Course Description

In this lecture, we will clarify the space-time of life unique to living things and the space-time of culture unique to people by comparing and contrasting it with the space-time created by technology. On top of that, we will examine themes such as the new virus pandemic and artificial intelligence from a broader and deeper perspective, and argue that time, space, names, and life are inherently diverse. Through these series of explorations, I would like to present a novel worldview of the space-time of life and culture.
