1. Course Description

In this class, we will deepen our understanding of workshops, which are attracting attention as a new style of participatory experiential learning. In this year's class, we will plan, organize, and evaluate a workshop in which students go to collect stories (everyday episodes, history, etc.) from the area around the university and turn them into plays by themselves. This course is closely related to "Pedagogy I", but also deals with more advanced content. This course is closely related to "Pedagogy I", but also covers more advanced topics, so students are welcome to take it consecutively. The number of students is limited to 20, and students are required to participate in the guidance at the first session. If the number of students exceeds the limit, a lottery will be held. Priority will be given to students who have taken the course consecutively from Pedagogy I.
