1. Course Description

In this course, we will organize our knowledges about the various practices, interactions, norms, and conduits that arise from the various educational activities that we have all experienced in various settings, such as education at school, at home, and in society, based on the research that has been published so far. Specifically, I will introduce basic knowledge and ideas about the history, systems, and realities of education, and then deepen our learning through individual and group work to see how we can organize these in our own minds and how we can interpret our own experiences to date.
