

Mind-Body Development and Its Relation to Learning Process

Syllabus Number

EDU-123

Elective

2 credit

KANDA, Takashi

1. Course Description

This course deals with the basic concepts and principles of the human development and learning process. At the end of the course, participants are expected to recognize and recall major terms and concepts in human development and learning, describe and explain major methods and theories, and apply theories or findings to real world situations. Your final grade will be calculated according to the following process: Mid-term examination (20-30%), term-end examination (80-70%), and a fraction of in-class contribution.