1. Course Description

In this course, students rotate the role of case presentation and listeners/commenters as participants in group supervision sessions that are held weekly. The aim is to let students : (1) develop clinical competencies to apply appropriate interventions to clients in a practicum setting, and (2) understand legal and ethical concerns relevant to clinical supervision and demonstrate sensitivity to these concerns in discussions. Some of the sessions would be held together with the students in the first year of master's degree.
