1. Course Description

This class aims to comprehensively clarify the trends and current issues of the Japanese and global economies, using major economic theories and important economic data, as well as to examine how each economic entity in Japan needs to respond.

In the spring semester, we will identify the current situation and issues in each area of the economy, such as public finance and monetary policy, and then examine the future outlook and desirable course of action, mainly using theories from macroeconomics, public finance, monetary theory, and international economics.
