1. Course Description

There are habits that we casually practice in our daily lives, and knowledge and ideas that we have acquired without knowing from our families. The study of traditions is a discipline that explains the culture of everyday life in the present age, using the acts, knowledge, and ideas that have been passed down from generation to generation that we take for granted. In this class, we will learn about the culture of everyday life through concrete festivals and rituals, what kind of actions our knowledge and ideas are manifested in.
