

Japan's Industries II

Syllabus Number

ECP-214

Elective

2 credit

TAKEDA, Motohide

1. Course Description

We will study the philosophy and know-how of "business", which is an important asset and know-how to operate modern global society and organizations to live well in those. Many companies, including manufacturing industries, rely on the good philosophy and know-how of "commerce" for their soundness, growth strategies, and sustainability.

For being leaders in starting new business in future, and students who are likely to take over the business of the family, we hope to recommend taking this course to prepare for these.

In the second semester, we will study on cases of growing contemporary industries and obtain knowledges on their challenges and changes required, especially in terms of the philosophy and know-how of "business".