1. Course Description

The purpose of this course is to enhance students' analytical skills on fiscal issues through (1) reading literature on public finance, (2) collecting materials, writing resumes, making presentations and discussions in seminars on various fiscal issues by themselves, and (3) acquiring presentation skills for social life after completing graduate school. The purpose of this course is to improve students' ability to analyze fiscal issues through resume writing, seminar presentations, and discussions, as well as to acquire presentation skills for post-graduate life.

This course is a master's course exercise in which students learn the "rules (plagiarism strictly prohibited)" and "basic knowledge of public finance" for writing a master's thesis, and examine various issues in contemporary public finance from the perspective of public finance.
