

Seminar I

Syllabus Number

SEM-301

Compulsory 2
credit

OWAKI, Junichi

1. Course Description

When you graduate from college, you will be thrown into the rough and tumble of society, whether you want to or not. What will protect you as you sail through these rough seas? Family? Friends? Your lover? Your company? None of these are 100% definite. What should I do? The only sure thing that will protect you in such a situation is your "human power". Even if you are able to utilize 100% of the expertise you have learned so far, without human power, you will not be able to convey your thoughts and passion to others, nor will you gain their trust. Therefore, in this exercise, students will practice how to communicate their thoughts and passions to others by participating in projects and competitions and interacting with a variety of people. In addition, students will learn about and master various presentation tools and further deepen their knowledge by actually making things with their hands and reading literature in a loop.