

Sociological Academic Writing I

Syllabus Number

SOC-301

Elective

2 credit

SAKAMOTO, Hiroshi

1. Course Description

This class aims to fulfill one of the Department's Diploma Policies, which is to foster students' abilities to develop logical arguments founded on the results of investigation and research.

The ability to "develop logical arguments" is important not only to conduct research for students' undergraduate graduation thesis but also to prepare for life after graduating from the university. In this class, students and instructors will learn together how to write and compose reports and papers and will attempt to use these methods in practice.