

International Politics and Economics

1

Syllabus Number

ECO-203

Compulsory Elective

2 credit

李 素軒

1. Course Description

This course will provide students with the basic concepts and theories to grasp the dynamic nature of rapidly changing international political economy. Focusing on the interaction between the state and the market, major topics on the contemporary global political economy will be investigated such as the state power under globalization, the transformation of international monetary and financial system, and the international policy coordination.