

Basic Research in Psychology I

Syllabus Number

SEM-201

Compulsory 2
credit

HORITA, Yutaka

1. Course Description

Research on the relationship between individuals and society has traditionally been conducted in social psychology. In recent years, empirical research on human social behavior from the perspective of evolution has been conducted in other social science fields.

In this seminar, students will read literature on recent experimental research in the social sciences and make presentations.