

Special Topics in International Economics 2

GUO, Sizhi

Elective 2 credit

1. Course Description

At the stage of graduate school, it is important to learn the theory and knowledge on the international economy, emerging economies such as China, and to utilize the theory and knowledge at the same time to cultivate problem finding, survey / analysis and research ability accurately. In the second term, after studying in the previous term, we will analyze and study the global economy including the macroeconomic and microeconomic aspects of the international economy, including China and other emerging economies. Besides that, teachers and students will also discuss issues related to the international economy.