1. Course Description

Countries in the world exist based on their natural environment and history, which produce their cultures, lives, tradition and industries. Therefore to learn the relationship between the background such as "geography/history" and current status such as "culture/people's life/traditional art/industry" leads to understand countries more essentially and deeply.

In this course, students will learn relationship between "geography, climate, history" and "culture, life, industry" of major countries in the world and see how world heritages were produced by cultural and natural factors.
