1. Course Description

Whether you are an entrepreneur or not, you will always have opportunities to make presentations when you enter the workforce. Whether you are looking for a job, proposing a project at work, acquiring a client, or promising your future to your girlfriend, you must convey your thoughts and passion to others and make them like you. In this lecture, you will learn communication and presentation skills to properly convey your thoughts to others without being flustered at such times.

Specifically, we will train students to actually take action by actively participating in on-campus contests, off-campus competitions, and private and industry-academia collaborative projects in which I am involved.
