1. Course Description

Students make groups according to the theme of their own interest. Juvenile deviation, hikikomori and various problems in family settings are catchy topics for pop-psychology, but deeply intertwined with various factors. During the spring semester, the theme and the measure of the study would be decided through careful search for preceded studies and sufficient discussion in a group. Senior members develop their studies based on the experiences in the previous year, that would be the great hints for juniors.
