1. Course Description

This lecture is an introductory level macroeconomics course that bridges the gap between the high school level economics learned in the previous semester and the university level macroeconomics. In this lecture, we will cover the same range of topics as in the previous semester, but we will also go into more specialized topics, so please note that this lecture is not exactly the same as the previous semester.

As in the previous semester, there will be a lot of writing on the board, so students may feel a little demanding. Concentration is the key to success in this course. In addition, it is important to pursue "why" such as "why is it so" and "why do we think so". By taking this course, please acquire the habit of thinking about "why" when you look at economic phenomena in your daily life.
