1. Course Description

This class covers themes related to Korean history, culture, society, and education. In particular, we will consider the issue of war responsibility and the various issues derived from war responsibility. Through this project, the aim is to deepen knowledge and understanding of Korean society in general, and to deeply examine the relationship between Japan and Korea. Class participants decide on a theme that interests them, organize the content logically, and give presentations that are easy for the listener to understand. Listeners cherish the questions, new discoveries, and new knowledge that arise and actively participate in the discussion. Class participants must give at least one presentation and submit an essay reflecting the results of the discussion at the end of the semester.
