1. Course Description

In this exercise, we will read a dissertation on history. Then, students will be able to discover questions and problems on their own and solve them. This will allow it to be used for writing graduation thesis and future career choices. A dissertation is written by a researcher to solve a specific question or problem. Therefore, by reading it, we can learn how to solve questions and problems. However, the content is so specialized that this exercise will give a lecture on how to read it. I would like to make the exercise so that students can exchange opinions, not just the instructor giving a one-sided lecture.
