

Environment and Ecology 1

Syllabus Number

ECE-103

[VII]

Elective 2

credit

KANO, Rui

1. Course Description

The environment is the total of external things such as home, society, and nature that surround living things, including us. Ecology often refers to the interaction between living things and the environment. Therefore, learning about the environment and ecology is important for improving our lives. In this class, we will give lectures on the relationship between humans and animals and diseases transmitted from animals.