Engineering Humanics

Syllabus Number 1J204 Special Subjects Élective 2 credit

OZAKI, Kyoichi

1. Course Description

In this class students comprehend human beings from the viewpoints such as philosophy, psychology, human relations so that the mutual understanding in the complicated human relations of workplaces reaches smoothly.

2. Course Objectives

1.Students understand various views of human beings, and form their own views of human beings.

2. Students understand various human characters and recognize their own characters.

3.Students understand various causes of troubles in the human relations and know the appropriate solutions.

4. Students understand the enough communication techniques to solve various troubles in the workplaces.

3. Grading Policy 1.the final examination:70% 2.the papers during class

4. Textbook and Reference Textbook

Reference

- - -

5. Requirements(Assignments) Preparation for the next lecture

6. Note

7. Schedule

What is the human being?
The historical development of views of human being
What is the value and significance of life?
Content of human desires, fulfillment and adaptive behaviors
Personality and characters
Interpersonal likes and dislikes, sympathy and empathy
Personal happiness and social happiness
Helping each other at work and alienation of labor
Working conditions and work worth, social security
Engineer as a professional
Right to assert — mutual and collective approval
Veto — mutual and collective approval
Recognition and responses to harassment
Deliberation and controversy
Lecture Summary