Major Course: Local Government and Administration

Elective Requisites 2 credit

NAIKI, Shigeru

1. Course Description

As the follow-up to 'Administrative Law I', the students will learn the basic principle of Central and Local Government Administration.

In this course, the students will know many administrative lawsuits in the cases the local governments make the illegal decisions and do damage to people.

How to free the people from unlawful deeds committed by governments is the main target of this course. (Administrative Case Litigation Law, Administrative Appeal Law, State Redress Act)

The students will also study concrete examples of the administrative decisions through 'case study'. (The professor also holds the title of honorary professor at the Local Autonomy College, Ministry of Internal Affairs and Communications.)

The students can get the knowledge, accomplishment and attitude of DP(2・3).

2. Course Objectives

Japan is presently on the course of fundamental reform, including at the local government level.

The professor teaching this course has had a great deal of experience as a senior officer in both central and local governments, such as a diplomat, deputy mayor, general administrative manager and a pioneer of the "One village, one product" movement (a typical local development policy which has spread throughout Japan).

The professor is also an honorary research fellow of the University of Birmingham in England in the field of Government Administration and Sociology.

The students will learn the basic principles of Administrative Law which is the fundamental rule for the daily life. It is because the administration links closely to the citizen life in various fields such as welfare, school education, fire defense, road/river management, and other social infrastructures.

So, the students can establish the feelings of belonging as the member of the society
