International Economics

Syllabus Number 8C215 Major Course: Basic Elective 2 credit MIZOGUCHI, Yoshihiro

1. Course Description

Basic level international economics will be lectured in this course. At first, we shall review Japan's current circumstances of international economic activities. After that, determinants of trade patterns will be lectured on. Those who register for this course are expected to understand that comparative advantage is very important. At the same time, gains from trade will be also taught. Following that, effects of trade policy and basic knowledge of world trade systems will be introduced. If we have time, discussions about multinational firms and foreign direct investments will be introduced.

2. Course Objectives

There are two objectives for this course. The first objective is to learn basic level international trade theory. The second is to apply the knowledge of international trade theory, learned through the lectures in order to understand problems related to the international transactions of goods and services.

3. Grading Policy

Course registrants are evaluated with homework and final exams. The following two conditions are needed to obtain the credits. One is to submit homework that meets certain standards. The other is to take the final exam and to score more than a certain level.
