Major Course: Basic

Elective 2 credit

NAIKI, Shigeru

1. Course Description

The administration linking closely to the citizen life in various fields, such as welfare, school education, fire defense, road/river management, and other social infrastructures, is conducted in most cases by the local government. So the total amount of expenditures made by local governments is about twice that of the central government. Regional finance plays an extremely important position, so to speak, as one of the two wheels of a vehicle, together with national finance.

The students can learn fundamental matters such as the relationship between local government finance and the central government finance, distribution of tax sources, local allocation tax, and local bonds. In addition to that, the students will also learn the recent reforms of the regional financial system to promote regional sovereignty reforms.

The students can get the knowledge, accomplishment and attitude of DP(1・2・3).
